

Human Capital Investment and Globalization in Extortionary States

by

Fredrik Andersson

Kai A. Konrad

Stein Rokkan Centre for Social Studies
Bergen University Research Foundation
December 2002

Working Paper 22-2002
The Globalization Program

Content

| | |
|---|-----|
| Foreword | iii |
| Abstract..... | 1 |
| Introduction..... | 2 |
| The model..... | 5 |
| The closed economy..... | 7 |
| The laissez-faire equilibrium | 8 |
| The Leviathan equilibrium | 8 |
| A globalized world..... | 10 |
| Zero migration cost..... | 12 |
| Tax competition with finite moving costs..... | 15 |
| Summary | 18 |
| Appendix | 19 |
| References..... | 20 |

Foreword

This publication comes out of the Strategic Program for Research on Globalization and Internationalization: welfare, work, legitimacy and globalization, at the Stein Rokkan Centre for Social Studies at Bergen University Research Foundation. This program is designed as a University of Bergen research network, and its primary area of activity is the study of changes in welfare and labor market institutions as they are played out in the debate on globalization and internationalization (see <http://129.177.180.14/globalisering/programnotat.pdf>).

Issues of distribution, regulation and fairness are central to the program, which incorporates research in sociology, political science, economics, history and philosophy. One basic premise for program research is that focusing on welfare and labor market institutions can provide important insights into other areas of society and that it can also shed light on other globalization issues, such as the status of the nation state and conditions for democratic governance.

Fredrik Andersson (born 1968) is an associate professor of economics at the University of Lund, Sweden. Important research areas are public economics and human capital investments. He has published widely, in journals as European Economic Review, Economica, Journal of Labor Economics and Journal of Public Economics.

Kai A Konrad (born 1961) is research professor at WZB (Social Science Research Centre Berlin) and professor of economics at Free University Berlin. He is also adjunct professor at the University of Bergen, associated with the Globalization program at the Rokkan Centre. His most important research fields are political economy and public finance. He edits Economics of Governance and has been the editor of Economic Policy. In the year 2000 he received the Gossen award, that is awarded annually to German economists below the age of 45 that have won international recognition. He has published a large number of research articles, in journals as American Economic Review, Economic Journal, Journal of Public Economics and European Economic Review.